

DEserted from his Master's Service, last Evening, after Ten o'Clock, a Negro Man, New-England born, named Sias, aged 24 Years; a stout, lusty Fellow, active, bold and impudent, about 5 Feet 9 or 10 Inches high, moderately splay-footed, rather long-visaged, and hath several Marks, left by the King's Evil, on his Neck, just above the Collar of his Shirt: He took off with him an old light coloured fulled Cloth Jacket, a Pair of Breeches nearly the same, a white Flannel Shirt, with an unwhitened Towcloth Collar, and a Towcloth Frock and Trowsers, all of them Homespun, besides a Pair of blue checked Trowsers, an old brown Broadcloth Jacket, lined with red Duffil, and a smartly-cocked Hat. Whoever shall apprehend the said Servant, and deliver him to either of his Masters, Godfrey Malbone, of Pomfret, or John Malbone, at Newport, shall have One Guinea Reward, and all necessary Charges paid, at either of those Places.

GODFREY MALBONE.

Pomfret, Sept. 7, 1775.
